(Schenectady, NY) -- For nearly a decade, comedian Aaron David Ward has entertained audiences in more than 12 states from New Hampshire to California by getting them to laugh and think at his self-deprecating, socio-political, and culturally critical comedy. Aaron has performed throughout the Northeast and Midwest, appeared in the Boston Comedy Festival, and in several movies including What I See In The Dark and Aftermath as well as a pilot for MTV and VH1 entitled The List. Every week on MY TV 4 in Albany, NY, Aaron appears on a hit TV show called The Glenn Slingerland Situation where he provides comedic commentary critics describe as "Andy Rooney on Acid." Jaye McBride is a comedian from upstate New York who had performed at the Comedy Store and the Laugh Factory in LA, Caroline's on Broadway and many places in between. Her humor is dry, intelligent but a little disturbing too. If Mitch Hedberg and Joan Rivers got together and had an abortion, it would be Jaye McBride. Visit her website <http://jayemcbride.com/>

Matt Kelly has performed throughout the Northeast including at some of New York City's top comedy clubs. He has great jokes and a sharp delivery. This charming young comedian has been delighting audiences everywhere with his unique style. For more information about Matt Kelly, visit his website <http://mattkellycomedy.com>

Café Nola representing New Orleans, Louisiana-serves a variety of Cajun specialties including po' boys, ettoffee, jambalaya, dirty rice, gumbo and alligator bites. Owner Kevin Brown insists that his traditional Cajun fare is not all about being spicy. "Louisiana cooking has the unfortunate reputation that it has to be hot and spicy," said Brown. "This is simply not true. The true art of Cajun cooking is the unique blend of herbs and spices that serve to enhance the flavor of vegetables, seafood, meat, poultry and wild game. In addition, the chef must know how to blend the ingredients together." For more information about Café Nola visit its website <http://www.cafenolany.com/>
